Oil Giant, cow Initial ear Accord

By Robert Mott

18 (WP)—A five-year scientific and techno-agreement centered on oil and natural gas exthe Soviet Union and the Occidental Petroleum is was announced here today by Occidental chair-ned last Friday in Moscow between a group of led by Mr. Hammer and the Soviet State nee and Technology, was described by the 74-year-old entrepreneur at a news conference as one of the first developments of the trade agreement signed in Moscow on May 29 by President Nixon and Soviet leaders. "In all my 51 years' relationship with the Soviet Union, I have never found the grounds more favorable for the rapid expansion of East-West-trade than exists at the present time," Mr. Hammer said

In response to unconfirmed suggestions that the deal will be the largest in history between the Soviet Union and the West, Mr. Hammer said a rumored figure of $3 hillon was "never mentioned" during week-long negotiations with several Soviet agencies. "I don't know where that figure came from," he said. He also declined to make even a rough estimate of the potential value of the accord. "I simply don't know," he added. Mr. Hammer implied, however, that the bulk of the multiple agreement will involve the bartering of U.S. bechnology in return for Soviet raw materials, and not the transfer of hard Specifically, the agreement cov-

Fourth Game Of Chess Series Ends in Draw

REYKJAVIK, July 18 (UPI).— U.S. challenger Bobby Fischer won a battle over television cameras tonight but had to settle for a draw with Boris Spassky after 45 moves in a seesaw fourth game for the worldchess championship.
Spassky offered the draw with a simple inclination of his head after Fischer made his 45th move, a pawn to his queen hisbop three, and Pischer accepted immediately. The two shook hands across the table and Pischer got up with his glass of orange, juice in his hand and strode from the hall

The draw left Spessky with a 2 1/2 point to 1 1/2 point advantage over the American challenger in the 24 game, $250,000 world championship. The fifth game is scheduled for

Thursday at 1700 GMT. King Pawn Opening Fischer started the game with his almost inevitable king pawn opening, and Spassky responded with a Sicilian defense, a rare move for the Russian. The American held a pawn advantage after 20 moves. But a dublous 19th move gave the initiative to Spassky.

The Russian; whose less to Fischer Sunday and last night was his first in 12 years of playing Fischer, quickly leaped to the attack and had a slight position advantage in the middle game. However, experts said, a dubious 29th move by Spassky lost him that initiative, and the game headed for an almost certain Spassky played quickly in the opening moves taking only three minutes to complete his first 10

Sadat Ends Russian Presence; Egyptians to Man Soviet Arms

CAIRO, July 18 .- President Anwar Sadat today announced that Egypt was ousting all Soviet military personnel from the country and accused Moscow of limiting its arms supplies. The Egyptian leader said that Russian forces had already begun to leave for home.

He told the central committee of the Arah Socialist Union-Egypt's only political party—that he had denounced the Russians for three things-limitation of the kind of arms it was supplying to Egypt, support of the continuing state of no-war-no-peace in the Middle East, and readiness to concede Arab territory in a Middle East settlement

President Sadat said he had rejected all three things and had told the Russians frankly of Egypt's stand, The Middle East News Agency said Mr. Sadat announced that military installations and equipment installed by the Russians were Egyptian property and would be operated by the Egyptian armed forces.

He also said a Soviet-Egyptian meeting would be held at a level yet to be defined.

Mr. Sadat said consultations were going on with the Russians to decide the style of cooperation which will be most effective for the future.

"After studying the position from all its angles and with full appreciation of the huge Soviet aid to us and concern for Soviet friendship. I found it ap-propriate at the outset of a new stage of that friendship, to make these decisions," Mr. Sadat said. Official Cairo sources said the

In Washington, the State Department declined comment. A spokesman warned against speculation on a meeting in Cairo yesterday between Joseph Green. chief U.S. diplomat there, and Mr. Sadat's chief security adviser, Mohamed Hafez Ismail, but said that Cairo requested the meeting.

Among the signatories were Abdel Latif Baghdadi ond Kamaleddin Hussein, who were mem-bers of the junta which in 1952 carried out the coup that toppled the monarchy.

Mr. Sadat had mentioned the note in a speech in Cairo last May, and promised to have it appear in the press, but this never happened.

Would Gain Temporary Control

Spain's Vice-Premier to Get Key Post If Gen. Franco Dies

By Henry Giniger pected to be pleased with the MADRID, July 18 (NYT).-Adm. Luis Carrero Blanco, Generalissimo Francisco Franco's second in command and a political conservative, appeared today to have been put in a position to take over effective control of the Spanish regime after the general's death

This, in the opinion of expert political observers here, seemed to be the principal effect of two laws that Gen. Franco made public without warning on the 36th anniversary of his successful rebellion.

The laws are intended to cover gaps in those providing for the succession of Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon as head of the state after Gen. Franco's death. The prince was named three years ago as future king. The laws of succession, which date from 1947, did not provide for any specific deadline by which the king should be sworn in. Today's measures declared that this should be done within eight days after Gen. Franco's death.

Dang Man of 69 measure also declared that if there were no existing premier, a post that Gen. Franco himself now holds. then the vice-premier would automatically become head of government. The vice-premier is Adm. Carrero, a somewhat dour man of 69 who has long been the general's closest collaborator. Although the king would have the power to name a premier from a list of three submitted to him by the 17member Council of the Realm, it was thought highly unlikely that the powerful admiral would not figure on the list or that Juan Carlos would cast him aside when he already occupied the

"If Juan Carlos did so, that would be a revolution in itself," one commentator remarked in

The result of the complicated wording appeared to be an effort by Gen. Franco indirectly to im-pose on his successor a man of complete loyalty to the founder of the present regime and to its authoritarian principles. There are hopes both in Spain and in Western Europe that the advent of the monarchy under a young king would mean a loosening of the rigid structures now prevailing and the consequent acreptance of Spain into the democratic-minded European Economic Community.

Juan Carlos, who is now sailing off the Balearic Islands, was exdeadline imposed for his swearing in. Immediately upon Gen.

Meeting of Common Market Brings Calm to Money Crisis

By Clyde H. Farnsworth

LONDON, July 18 (NYT) --The results of a London monetary conference of the Common Market today brought at least temporary calm to the crisis-plagued financial centers of Europe.

For the first time in a week the Western European central banks did not have to acquire any more surplus dollars, following declarations from the conference that existing currency relationships among the con-tinental powers would be main-

The Europeans also reached a measure of agreement on principles for the reform of the international monetary system in talks here yesterday and today. This preliminary understanding, which could help restore stability to the shaky monetary structure more quickly than most experts had envisaged, was another element in dissipating at least temporarily the crisis atmosphere. Market operators representing oil sheikhs of the Middle East.

They can also hold fast to present parities and try to keep out dollars by building walls of exchanga controls.

Dollars for Marks Most of the dollars have flowed into Germany, where central bank governor Karl Klasen, an anti-floater, won the upper hand over former Economics Minister Karl Schiller, who resigned two weeks ago.

Asked by Italian central bank governor Guido Carli how long the Bundeshank can go on taking dollars, Bundesbank chairman Klasen replied, according to informants. The sky's the limit-marks for dollars. Mr. Klasen told newsmen today that Germany's recent imposition of exchange controls showed the country was acting in a "European" spirit.

France has long urged Germany to take such action, rather than float the mark, which, in French eyes, would endanger the Common Market structure of farm support and weaken the market program for monetary

But there have been signs of late that as the Germans moved toward the French position on exchange controls, the French were moving toward what had been Mr. Schiller's position-that the market currencies should float together.

This would mean the currencies of the market states would move as a bloc against the dollar. They would in effect be tightly chained together.

The Hamburg newspaper Die Welt published the resignation letter of Mr. Schiller in which he quoted the West German ambassador in Paris as saying French President Georges Pompidou "appears to be ready to consider a joint floating of all European currencies . . . [More details, Page 7.1

By Theodore Shabad MOSCOW, July 18 (NYT).— The reported Egyptian demand for the removal of Soviet military advisers may not be good news to the Kremitn but it is likely to be welcomed by the man in the street who has been traditionally critical of a heavy foreign aid burden while his own rising expectations are left wanting.

The small Soviet dissident movement has sought to capitaize on this popular aversion to heavy expenditures abroad. A recent underground appeal calling on Russians to strike for better living conditions made a particular point of the sums being spent on the Arabs.

If any change was impending, Soviet citizens did not learn about it tonight from the officially controlled news media. Tass reported briefly on the meeting of the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's ruling party, where the decision

The note, saying that the Russians were promoting their position in Egypt without actually helping the latter to recover the Arab territory Israel occupied in 1967, was taken by observers as new evidence that the opposition to Mr. Sadat inside Egypt was pegged on the growing Soviet presence there.

In recent weeks, a debate has been going on in the state-controlled press in Cairo on whether the uneasy peace in the Middle East was in the interest of the Mobamed Hassanein Helkal, the editor of the Cairo newspaper Al Ahram, said the Russians were benefiting from this state of affairs, but not as much as Israel and the United States.

The Russians showed signs of annoyance, President Nikolai V. Podgorny capitalized on the visit to Moscow earlier this month by Syrian President Haiez Assad to declare that the claim that the Soviet Union was seeking the perpetuation of the Middle East stalemate was "a lie."

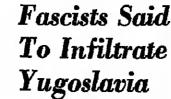

Observers recalled that at the meeting of the central committee of the Arab Socialist Union last April, 75 percent of the questions put to Mr. Sadat by the mem-bers pertained to the Soviet presence in Egypt.

Mr. Sadat emphasized that there were no Soviet bases in Egypt, end that the Russians were only getting "facilities" for their navy at Egyptian Mediterranean Informed sources believe that Mr. Sadat's final decision to get the Soviet troops out may have been due to pressure from within the Egyptian Army. Press reports here recently have referred to friction between the Soviet edvisers and high-ranking Egyptian Unconfirmed speculation circulating here tonight said that there had been a movement against Mr. Sadat within the army, and that it was checked after the president agreed to scale down the Soviet military presence in the country,

BELGRADE July 18 (AP).-Terrorists have penetrated into Yugoslavia for the first time in more than 20 years, government sources have revealed.

They were identified as Usteshi, heirs of the Yugoslav Fascists who ruled during World War II in the Nazi puppet etate in Croatia. Since the war they have carried out intermittent bombings and other terrorist acts against Yugoslav diplomatic missions in Europe.

They claimed responsibility for the murder of Yugoslavia's am-bassador to Stockholm last year. This month the federal police announced that a "Ustashi-Fascist group of terrorists entered Yugoslavia fliegally recently." The police added that the group was partly destroyed and said authorities were on the trail of the survivors.

The group was reported to be in western Bosnia, a mountainous part of the country suitable for guerrilla activities.

Informed sources said the group, believed to be 18 to 30 persons, was well trained and armed with high-powered rifles with silencers and telescopic sights Some sources said a number of people have been killed and

The naming of Adm. Carrero as automatic head of government was expected to be less pleasing to Juan Carlos, who will thus find his room for maneuver more limited than it might have been. There had been persistent rumors that the 79-year-old caudillo might name a premier soon with whom he could share his power. But implicitly at least, these ru-mors were laid to rest today. The laws declared that the leadership of the state, of the government end of the so-called Movement, the only legal political organization here, belonged for a lifetime to the caudillo of Spain.

Like Juan Carlos, most Spanlards were relaxing under a bot sun today, which is a national holiday, and presumably not thinking of politics too much. It was a day of much praise in oilicial statements and press editorials for the regime's contributions to the peace and prosperity

The huge "silence" signs flashed almost continuously after a move, and at one point arbiter Lothar Schmid asked that the doors to the hall be ofled to keep them from squeaking when people went in and out.

Outside the hall an almost carnival atmosphere reigned, with fans munching hot dogs and giant Iceland cakes with whipped cream. They est and watched what should have been a closedcircuit telecast of the game but instead showed only a heard with the moves on it.

Mr. Maudling, who served on the boards of several other com-panies before he became home secretary, also has come under fire for his past relations with an American, Jerome Hoffman, now in jail in New York for fraud. Mr. Maudling, then a member of Parliament in opposition, egreed to serve as president of Mr. Hoffman's Real Estate Fund of America and Real Estate Management of America. He left the Hoffman investment business before it collapsed.

Such relationships have led some members of Parliament to question Mr. Maudling's judgment, rather than his honesty.

The outside financial interests of members of Parliament are not governed by rules as such. Many continue as directors of companies, lawyers or public relations consultants while in the House. Traditionally, a member is expected to disclose his person-al interest in pending legislation only if he takes the floor to speak on the issue in the debate.

The current controversy has led to demands from Jeremy Thorpe, leader of the small Liberal party, which first raised the Poulson case in Parliament, to demand that all members of Parliament reveal all their business interests. Liberal party members now make e full public disclosure of their interests. But this does not extend to Labor or Tory members,

Russia Signs 5-Year Pact With Occidental Petroleum

(Continued from Page 1) geological surveys of "all potential areas" within the Soviet Union and an exchange of visits by experts from both countries in preparation for the next scheduled meeting of the two groups, in Moscow on Sept. 11.

Mr. Hammer said that one likely benefit to the United States would be to relieve the pressure on its dwindling supply of natural gas. "That is one of our aims," he said, adding that his company was also interested in acquiring Soviet fertilizers, nickel, chromium and other minerals.

The Russians, he said, are principally interested in the technology that Occidental can sup-ply, tocluding its more advanced techniques in offshore well-drilling. He refused to comment on whether the U.S. company will build a pipeline from oil and gas fields in western Siberia to a coastal port. Such a pipeline would have to be about 3,000 miles long, and an earlier Japanese estimate of the cost of such a project was around $1-billion. One source close to Occidental called the joint venture "the biggest Russian deal ever complet-ed by an American company, though Mr. Hammer, who em-"the only authorized one," said he had no idea if this would turn out to be true, although he said "I certainly hope so."

Mr. Hammer also indicated that several hotels will be built in the Soviet Union through the Holiday Inn chain, with which Occidental is involved in a major construction program throughout Europe and the Mediterranean. "They have a great need for hotels in the U.S.S.R.," he said.

He attributed the success of his group's negotiations directly to President Nixon's summit conference with Soviet leaders last May, but also to his own personal connections. Mr. Hammer went to the Soviet Union in 1921 as young doctor determined to help treat famine and typhus epidemic victims, but ultimately worked out a barter deal directly with Lenin for the importation of wheat from the United States in return for Soviet goods. He later started his own pencil factory to supply the Russians in their literacy campaign, and un-til 1930 was the official representative in the Soviet Union for 37 U.S. firms, including the Ford Motor Co. Mr. Hammer next went to Moscow in 1961 as an emissary of President Kennedy, who asked him to explore possibilities for increased Soviet-American trade, and has made several trips since then. On last week's visit, he was accompanied by executives of his own company, of the Holiday Inns Corp. and of the Bechtel Corp., a major builder of oil refinery equipment.

Asked why the amouncement of the accord was made in London and not in New York or Los Angeles, Mr. Hammer said both sides felt it best to make the announcement as quickly as asible to minimize stock-market speculation, and that he "just happened to be in London" buying a drawing by Leonardo da Vinci (he has an art collection estimated to be worth about $20 million), and was equally evasive on that point—he refused, with a smile, to say how much he paid for the drawing.

The Common Market's Monetary Committee and the Committee of Central Bank Governors have been charged with the task of drawing up a plan phasing out the dollar balances.

This would be presented to the next ministerial meeting of the six present members of the Common Market and the four future ones in Luxembourg Sept. 11-12. just before the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund, where reform questions will be discussed with the United States and Japan, among others.

All the ideas at present advanced involve expanded use of special drawing rights as the doilare reserve role is reduced. The more than $40 billion outstanding in the vaults of central banks represents short-term debts of the United States. The point of the operation will be to convert these into long-term obligations. The dollar in the foreign exchange markets moved off its floor (the lower trading limits) against the major continental currencies vesterday. Against the German mark, the dollar was quoted at 3.1540 marks to the dollar, up from the floor of 3.1500.

Southern Units In People's Party Back McGovern

MIAMI, July 18 (AF).— People's party delegates from eight Somhern states voted Sunday not to back Dr. Ben-jamin Spock as the party's presidential candidate and threw their support to the Democratic nominee Sen. George McGovern. An official of the party claimed the decision to back Sen. Mc-Govern, if followed by the party's national convention next week could mean "millions of votes" for the South Dakota senator.

The third-party acherents could assure that Sen Mc-Govern's name will appear on both the Democratic and People's party lines in voting booths in the South, even if the July 26-30 St. Louis convention decides to stick with Dr. Spock, according to John Parker of Miami a Southern regional representative of the party.

Poll Shows a Landslide for Nixon If the Election Were Held Now

NEW YORK July 18 (Reuters).-President Nixon would have a landslide victory if the presidential election were held now, according to a nationwide survey published by News-

The survey, which appears in the magazine's current issue, gives President Nixon 236 solid electoral votes and an additional 64 leaning toward him for a total of 300-or 30 more than the 270 majority required for a victory.

Under the American system, the president is not elected direct popular vote. Each state is allocated a number of what is called Electoral College votes. The candidate who wins the popular ballot-even if only by a single vote-gets all of that state's Electoral College votes. At the same time, the survey found only seven certain electoral votes for the Democratic challenger, Sen. George

McGovern, of South Dakota-four from his home state and three from the District of Columbia. Twenty-nine votes-those of Wisconsin, Rhode Island and Massachusetts-were said to be leaning toward him, making his possible total at the moment 36. About 205 other electoral votes, however, were listed as uncertain now, including those from such major states as California, Illimois, Pennsylvania and New York.

Committee counsel Joseph Phillips said Barboza unexpectedly made the charge about fronting for the mobs in the two hotels when he was asked about a completely unrelated matter at the May 24 hearing.

Mr. Phillips said the answer could not have been anticipated or cut off. He noted that the Fontaineblean had filed an affidavit with the committee denying the story.

"And e that point someone, cresumably the counsel, should have done something to refute that story," Mr. Sinatra said. He suggested the committee should have called the press in and announced the hotel's statement "I don't have to refute it because there isn't any truth to it,"

The Mark of Cain

When Kozo Okamoto was sentenced to life imprisonment for his part in the mas-Sacre at the Lydda Airport, the president of the military tribunal which tried him said: "This crime is a Mark of Cain upon you and your employers, and you will never be able to erase it." The statement was true enough, so far as the great majority of humanity is concerned. But what of that minority that considers Okamoto's act a badge of honor? Or of those others who might regard this particular deed of violence as a crime, but justify others, against equally innocent victims elsewhere? The death of Abel at the hands of Cain, his brother, has had a varied and terrible progeny down through the years, and the Mark of Cain has been smudged and distorted by motives and slogans that range from the highest idealism to the lowest forms of greed and madness.

Okamoto, apparently, shot into the crowd at the airport to serve world revolution in general, and his allegiance to the Palestine guerrilla movement was only incidental. For him, in the grim anarchist phrase, there were no innocents—and, one would guess, no rational relationship between goals and means. For his employers, the Palestinian guerrillas, Okamoto and his companions were striking against the state of Israel, hitting at its trade like privateers of old, and the dead were presumed guilty because of their use of Israeli facilities.

And, as always, the justification for such private acts of war were the public ects of war, which also slay the unarmed and the innocent, whether in a Lebanese village or a city of Vietnam. Institutionalized violence, by the police, hy organized society through its courts and its militia, all too many fanatics today, has been advanced as an excuse for private violence in the United States, and in other countries as well, whether the private acts are assassination, random looting and arson, or even rape.

Is there a distinction? Yes, because to place the right of killing into every individual's hands, at the guidance of his personal conscience, is the worst kind of anarchy. It is certainly not institutions alone that can make mistakes; governmental institutions were founded, in no small part, to correct the errors to which those they govern are prone. The United States is painfully aware of how little men can magnify themselves with a gun, and seek to change history with assassination.

Moreover, institutions can negotiate; their errors-and even crimes-can find means of atonement; their relationships can be changed publicly; their commitments can be set down concretely. But for the private person or the secret group. this is virtually impossible. Even when they combine for a common goal, they may end by fighting one another as the anarchists and Communists did in Russia and Spain.

The world has come to be wary of too easily attributing the Mark of Cain to acts of violence. Perhaps too much so: crime condoned can be crime encouraged. and in the tight-knit modern world the repercussions of a single bomb, and single gonshot, can have far-reaching effect. Ethan Allen was only blustering when, in his three-fold hattle with Britain, New York and New Hampshire to establish the state of Vermont he threatened to retire "into the desolate caverns of the mountains, and wage war with human nature at large." But that is the actual sin of

The Europe Connection

The President who takes office next January is certain to be confronted by the necessity for a more positive, more imaginative, more sensitive American policy for Western Europe. This cannot mean a return to the dominant role in NATO played by the United States in earlier years; but neither can it mean a walkaway from dependable defense and trade ties to Europe.

In his speech accepting the Democratic presidential nomination last week, Senator McGovern went part of the way toward reassuring those who had feared that his zeal to reduce overseas military commitments and defense spending might lead to erosion of American responsibilities vis-à-vis Western Europe.

to maintain the solidarity imperative for negotiating safely even the foothills of détente with the Soviet Union and its partners. In the absence of substantial American leadership, the West could go into dangerous disarray against a monolithic Warsaw Pact in the projected European security conference and in negotiations for mutual force reductions in Europe.

The heartland of Western Europe currently suffers greater political instability than at any time since postwar recovery took dramatic hold behind the NATO shield and under the inspiration of the Marshall Plan. Governments of Britain, France, West Germany and Italy are being buffeted by crises unlikely to be resolved in the near future and certain to affect Western solidarity, including relations with the United States. Americans The Democratic distiorm strikes the concerned with maintaining high priority right note in calling for a policy based on for Europe in the overall United States a "partnership of equals." Yet, without foreign policy effort are convinced that solid evidence of an enduring American. Western unity furnishes the only trustcommitment, the alliance will be unable worthy foundation for détente, disarmament and peace.

The killer himself remains a somber and sobering example of protest and allenation taken to its ultimate, fanatical conclusion-destroy everybody, anybody and become a little star in the firmament.

It compares with the medieval order of the Assassins, sent drugged and delirious in their killing missions. Kozo Okamoto claimed to he a member of the Japanese Red Star Army, a claim which accentuates the non-Arab and pro-Communist leanings of the gang he served. His trial showed that it was possible without the new sphinx keeps silent. detection to send automatic weapons in airline passenger baggage from Europe to Lydda Airport. It showed also that killer training was being given at Baalbek under the noses of the Lebanese government and presumably not far out of earshot of much used tourist resorts. This sort of crime is a challenge to civilized governments everywhere, which will encounh unless they can together deal with the threat. Monetary Crises

One must realize that eeven months to the day after the signing of the accord which President Nixon called historic, the Washington compromise has been cut to pieces. The pound sterling has not withstood the pressure and the Italian lira is in dire peril. And vet. U.S. partners have never before been subjected to a greater domination of the dollar standard. They continue to pile up U.S. banknotes rather than try breaking the shackles which they had agreed to carry last December . . . Since the European countries remain opposed to a concerted float which would diminish their competitive capabilities, they have only one way left today: negotiate with the United States a moratorium of its debts. For the time being, the Americans remain impassive, relishing the joys afforded them by the inconvertibility of their currency. One after another, their partners go to ask them questions. ROME-Not in many a year has such an intolerable heat been felt here in the Holy City and in the country at large. The heat wave for the past week has been almost unbearable. People at work in the fields have fallen and died before help could reach them. Rome itself has been like a dead city during the day. No one, but no one ventures out into the streets during the afternoon. It is only in the early morning hours and late et night that the inhabitants venture forth, and even then, one is uncomfortable.

PARIS-The Fifth Annual Nec-Malthusian and Birth Control Conference has been in session in London. It may be accepted as being of some significance that the president, Dr. C. V. Drysdale, from his point of view made an extremely optimistic address. All organized opposition to birth control, he proclaimed, is dead, except only in the Roman Catholic Church, and if the statistics he cited are correct the amount of the world'e population may by and by become virtually stationary.

Ireland's Guerrilla Twins

By C. L. Sulzberger

CLONMEL, Tipperary, Ireland. -Tike any true killer, I wish to spare the victim," writes the contemporary Irish post John Montague and, in a certain sense, this might be called the sentiment of today's Irish Republican Army as its two bickering fac-tions continue their intermittent fight for a united Ireland.

The IRA, at best a very small organization with membership numbered at a few thousand, is divided by an ideological split. This produced separate "Provi-sional" and "Official" groups, both in the political branch, called Sinn Fein and in actual armsbearing operational units.

About the only things shared in common between the two forces nowadays is a desire for a unified country independent of Britain and for a secular republic. Both, moreover, are engaged in off-again, on-again shoot-outs with the British in Ulster but the Provisionals seem more active in this respect.

There are sharp cleavages on ideology, goals and methods which bring the minority Officials and the majority Provisionals into hostile confrontation, They formally split when the Provisionals set up their own organization in 1969.

In Dublin I talked with leaders of each group, despite the fact that theoretically they are considered illegal and should be locked up-which they aren't. Marxist "people's democracy" in a united Ireland, ending all capitalism. According to her, the Officials' non-Irish heroes are Marx Lenin and Castro, Stalin is frowned on and Tito and Mao Tse-tung are considered "not relevant."

Miss de Burca, who has a straightforward manner and honest blue eyes, earned local renown by hurling an egg at President Nixon's car during his 1970 visit here. She doesn't consider herself a true Marxist yet because "I am a good Christian" —although no longer Catholic.

She sneers at the "emotionalism" of the Provisionals and says they have no concrete program. She herself obviously favors the Marxist concept that Ireland'e is the first "national liberation movement." Nevertheless, although considered one of the Officials' principal intellectuals, she is more a physical activist. She has visited Palestine Arab guerrilla groups. He conveys the impression that he could be ruthless although he talks in a courteous, friendly fashion. He claims the Provisionals have hit both the British and the. Ulster economy much barder than the Officials. He wants a non-Marxist democratio state with a wholly secular legal structure and a phiral society.

O'Connell insists the Provisionals' objectives can ultimately be gained by peaceful means, despite current Ulster bloodshed. He adds: We wish to create an atmosphere in which negotiations become possible. We have proposed a provincial Ulster government, inside a unified Ireland, with full control over everything schools, and divorce without interference from Dublin." While engaged in operations against the British Army and Ulster Protestants, the Provisionals seem to be using more professional tactics than the Officials. According to O'Connell their principal models are the Greek Cypriot EOKA and the Israeli Irgun Zva Leumi, both of which fought British colonial administrations. More recent guerrilla theorists like Che Guevara are describe by O'Connell as "too academic."

O'Connell says the government is scared to move against the IRA which is "part of the Irish people." He claims the Provi-sionals stay in contact with Ulster British authorities in order to discuss occasionally the means of arranging truces.

Despite their doctrinal differences, both Miss de Burca and O'Connell make an impression of intense seriousness and devotion to their respective causes. Each is clearly ready to shed blood to gain objectives-O'Connell seeming to think such violence an initial phase, Miss de Burca indicating a belief it is an inevitable except defense and forcign policy.

ROME, July 18 (Renters) .-Rome police said today they have uncovered a large-scale "black slave trade" illegally transporting bindreds of African laborers each month from West Africa to France. Tight security measures have been imposed on Italian airports and seaports believed to have been used to channel them into the country.

Antonino Rispoli, a Rome deputy police chief and head of the city's 4th Police District, said that according to his investigaon men from Mali, the Ivory Coast and Senegal had been transported clandestinely as cheap labor to France for the past two years in groups of about 50.

Sometimes, they made the last part of their journey in sealed trucks, driven across the Italian border to Paris.

Mr. Rispoil has been quietly investigating the trafficking for six-weeks, but the situation was revealed last night when Italian police announced that 59 Africans from Mali had been sent to a refugee center outside Rome pending repatriation. They were found last Friday in a sealed truck which broke down ootsida Aix-les-Bains in France.

The truck was supposed to contain sewing machines. When the French driver, Michel Piteau, 28, falled to repair it after several hours, he went to Air police and said: "Please break open tha truck or they will all die." Inside, according to Mr. Rispoli,

French police found the 59 Africans, who had been shouting to be let out. They had been driven from Alessandria, some 150 kilometers inside Italy, in darkness and almost suffocating, with little food

Mr. Rispoli said that in Paris, the "consignments" of African laborers were met by a man with the pseudonym "Sow Amabeau" whose address is 75 Rue Riguette, and were put to work on construction : sites with minimal wages and without any health, social or job security.

Notary Freed, Fiancée Held in Bruay Case

By James Goldsborough

PARIS, July 18 (IRT: -The drawn-out investigation into the murder of a 16-year-old girl in Brusy, in Artois, took an unusuel turn today when a 37-year-old notary public held in preventive detention since April 13 was ordered released, and the judge who put him there was reported about to be removed from the case.

Pierre Leroy, the notary, was ordered released by the prosecutor's office in Amiens over the objections of the investigating magistrate in the case, Judge Henri Pascal, who is persuaded that Mr. Leroy is guilty.

The case has taken on national importance because of the clash betweeen Freoch institutions and the controversial nature of preventive detention.

The prosecutor's disavowal of Judge Pascal comes despite a new witness who testified that he saw Mr. Leroy and his fiancee, Monique Beghin-Mayeur, with a girl resembling the murdered girl about the time of her death. Following the new witness's testimony only last week, Judge Pas-cal ordered Mrs. Beghin-Mayeur also held in preventive detention for complicity in the case,

Since the defense's request to free Mr. Leroy antedated the new testimony, the prosecutor's office could not take the new evidence into account in its decision. Thus, though the evidence against Mr. Leroy is stronger than before, be is now free, and Mrs. Beghin-Mayeur remains in jail, though she can hardly be an accomplice if Mr. Leroy is not the principal This case has divided the nation as bave few others, prin-

The ministry said the West German Development Aid Service. the equivalent of the U.S. Peace Corps, has been asked to continue its work, bowever.

The three volunteers were accus-ed by the Bollviao authorities of having sheltered wanted persons in the wake of a rightist coup d'état last August.

dou has been heard to comment with distaste on the injustice of prolonged preveotive detention, and his remarks certainly were not ignored by the prosecutor's office in today's ruling. There are now strong indications that Judge Pascal, whom the defense has challenged for lack of impartiality, will be replaced by a new judge.

Judge Pascal has upset tha judiciary not only because he persisted in keeping the notary in jail on the basis of presumptions rather than proof, but because of his cooperation with the press. Only resterday, commenting on the charges against him, he told a group of journalists, "I am dis-appointed, because I wanted to break down the barriers between the judges and the judged. I have been trying to create a climate of confidence between the magistrature and the public."

The before clearing customs problem.

We've installed an automatic luggage conveyor system which ties into each gate. By the time you get off the plane and get to the luggage claim area, your luggage should be there.

In the luggage claim area, we've got 13 luggage race-tracks-more than the International Arrivals Building which serve 26 airlines. Twice as many as any other airline terminal has.

The clearing customs problem. At the International Arrivals Building, during

By David Stevens

ORANGE France (IHT).—The people behind the Nouvelles Charégies d'Orange have the right idea about a festival, or one of the right ideas namely, to offer undisputed masterpleoss with the best available performers and present them in a place that will make the results unique.

The site in this case is this Provençal city's Roman theater, reputed to be the best preserved of its kind, with its sensitive yet not over-resonant acoustics, with its still-intact wall as a grandiose backdrop for a stage the size of a football field, and seats for some 7,000.

About 5,000 of them were occupied Sunday for the opening of the second Orange festival with Bach's B-minor Mass, with the same forces that opened last year's event with the Verdi Requiem—Carlo Maria Giulini, the Orchestre de Paris and the New Philhermonia Chorus from London.

Combination

Perhaps the combination of the outdoor theater's vastness and the hi-fi intimacy of its acoustics suggested to the conductor that here he could have his barcque cake and eat it too with the icing of modern tonal sumptuousness. The result would doubless not here pleased baroque purists, but it was a performance that touched convincingly both the work's vastness of conception and devout intimacy of spirit.

With a chorus less sensitive and disciplined than the New Philharmonia, Ginlin's plan would not have worked so well. for its 200 voices might

Theater in Paris: Preview of the Fall Season

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

PARIS, July 18 (IRT).—It is the habit of the French theater to ring np the season immediately after the summer holidaye and usually with some alluring balt. This is a practical policy for the show that arrives at the beginning of September has the best chance. Theatergoers, relaxed by their vacations, are eager and, unless it is an impossible turkey, the play may have a profitable first rum of eight months in store. The theaters are now hawking their wares, announcing their programs for 1972-73.

The Comédie Française is planning a new staging of Giraudoux'e "Ondine," to be directed by Raymond Rouleau, and a double-bill of "Oedipus Rex" and "Oedipus at Colonos" by Sophocles, directed by Jean-Paul Roussillon. "Richard III" the most popular item of the current repertory, will

Several companies will pay visits: the Théâtre Populaire de Reims in Gorky's "The Lower Depths," directed by Robert Hossein; the Jean-Merie Serreau troupe with a revival of Ionesco's "La Soif et la Faim" and Dominique Houdard'e company in "Tu Connais la Musique" by Robert Abirached.

Le Petit Odéon's list includes "Le Rôdeur" by Jean-Claude Brisville, "Chez Les Titch" by Louis Calaferte, "Identité" by Roger Pinget and "Pélican" and "The Island of the Dead" of Strindberg. Later there will be a festival of plays by young authors.

Peter Brooks's production of 'A Midsummer Night's Dream," with its English cast, will play an engagement at the Theatre de la Ville. Later in the season Jean Mercure will produce "Santé Publique," an adaptetion of Peter Nichols's drama of London hospital life with an enormous number of actors; Corneille's "Le Cid" with José Maria Flotats as the Spanish conqueror and Mikhail Bulgakov's "The Purple Island" When a Comédie Francaise player attains great personal success he or she usually resigns

McDonald's Expects Higher Profit

McDonald's Corp. espects to report increased second-quarter earnings, Richard J. Boylan, senior executive vice-president, reports. The company earned 20.5 cents a share in the second quarter last year after an adjustment for a 2-for-1 stock split. McDonald's will report its earnings at the end of this month. Mr. Boylan noted that anslists are forecasting 90 to 95 cents a share for the year, compared with last years 68.5 cents, after adjustment for the split. He says the estimates are "in the ballpark."

U.S. Oil Firms Agree to Merge

Tidewater Marine Service Inc. and Exchange Oil & Gas Corp. have agreed in principle to merge in an exchange of stock valued at more than $50 million. The merger is subject to certain verifications and approval of a formal agreement hy the boards and holders of each company. The agreement contemplates the exchange of 0.35 share of Tidewater for each share of Exchange Oil. On that basis, approximately 1,826,158 shares Ste. Financière Européenne, of Paris, has, would be issued by Tidewater, after which it would have epproximately 5,870,921 common shares outstanding.

tons of oil a day. In the period from 1965 to 1970, the Tyumen district produced 68 million tons of oil and 32 billion cubic meters of gas. For the five-year period ending in 1975 the district is to produce 400 million tons of oil and 100 hillion cubic meters of gas. Oil output is to reach an annual rate of 120 million tons by 1975 and million to 260 million tons

All of this is accomplished or specifically planned output. Con-siderable additional production could be schieved with foreign help in providing the necessary investment.

Development Problems

But development problems match the deposits in size. While there is no doubt that the oil and gas are there, it is in one of the world's most inaccessiole Vast swamps and mos-DIACES. quito-infested woodland, perma frost and remoteness are obstacles the developers must overcome.

The Soviet Union has 2,500 geological and geophysical teams continuously prospecting for oil and gas, and about 2,000 exploratory wells are drilled each year. Valentin D. Shashin, minister of the oil industry, reported a year ago that 30 to 40 oil and gas deposits are found each year in the Soviet Union, with the country still relatively lightly explored. Vast areas of eastern Siberia and the Soviet Far East give promise of petroleum deposits, though they have not been explored.

Nevertheless, the Tyumen deposits are expected to remain un-

EEC Agrees On Cereal Prices, Trade

BRUSSELS, July 18 (AP-DJ). The Common Market council of agriculture ministers, including the four candidates, today agreed on intervention prices and trading centers for cereals in nine of the 10 countries.

"No one got exactly what he wanted, but we reached a reasonable compromise. I am very statistied," British Minister of Agriculture James Prior said. The EEC commission had proposed different price levels and trading centers for soft wheat end barley to be established in the candidate countries after

The proposals concern intervention prices, which are the guaranteed wholesale price, taking transport costs into account. For export of soft wheat and barley from the candidate countries into the EEC, the commis proposed border taxes which will bring the prices in Britain, Denmark and Ireland up to the EEC level over a five-year period.

When prices go up in Britain. producers are still cushioned by deficiency payments which will be abolished gradually.

Meanwhile, talks among Bri tain, Sweden and Finland on paper trade broke down today. Swedish officials said.

The paper issue is holding up completion of negotiations by the EEC Sweden and Finland on a free trade trenty.

Britain at the last minute re fused to promise Sweden and Pinland satisfactory duty-free quotas for their paper exports.

Under European Free Trade Area rules, Scandinavian paper But. entered Britain duty-free. now British paper industries are worried that access to Britain will be easier than to the rest of the EEC and they will not be able to meet the competition.

Japan's Growth Set by Bank at 9 Percent in '72

TOKYO, July 18 (Reuters).— Mitsubishi Bank said today it expects Jepan to achieve increased real economic growth of percent during the current nancial year ending March 31, 1973, compared with 5.7 percent in the last year.

The bank revised its previous forecast of an 8 percent growth in view of the unexpectedly fast recovery of industrial production and deliveries and progress of inventory adjustment

Economic growth will become ever larger than 9 percent if the new cabinet of Prime Minister Kakuel Tanaka takes further steps to accelerate recovery, the hank said .

The bank said the 16.88 per cent revaluation of the yen last December dispelled uncertainties about the future of the yen which had prevailed in Jepanese industries.

Justice Unit Says Plan Will Harm Competition

WASHINGTON, July 18 (AP-DJ).-The Justice Department's anti-trust division has told the Treasury that its pending regulations for enforcement of the 1921 anti-dumping act "threaten to have a very serious chilling effect" on fair import competition.

But Treasury officials, barety concealing their anger over the comments of the Justice Department unit, are likely to ignore most of the agency's recommen-

The Justice Department anti-trust division says that in a "disturbing number of cases," the Treasury has settled outstanding anti-dumping act investigations efter obtaining written assurances from companies abroad that they would refrain from making any further sales to U.S. buyers.

Outside Jurisdiction

Shutting off imports completely in this way is beyond the Treasury's jurisdiction and the scope of the anti-dumping law. the Justice Department unit said in a letter to the Treasury. The Common Market, Britain, Canada, Japan and Norway hava all challenged the pending rule changes, maintaining that they violate the international antidumping code or treat exporters abroad unfairly.

Treasury officials say the pending regulations will probably be made final later this year, with relatively few alterations, The rules will give the Treasury wider discretion in deciding whether imports are unfairly priced, allow for old anti-dumping cases to be reopened and shorten the time allowed for fact-finding by the Customs Bureau in anti-dumping investigations

BEAL ESTATE & BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Florida land in a Deltona community may well be the best investment you can make today.

There's no sure way of protecting your estate from inflation. However, many I houghtful financial advisers recommend land investments for the sochisticated portiolio, And, when it comes to land in the And, when it comes to serve in one United States, a number of important purchasers in large corporations have bought Florida property. Because Florida is the fastest growing state in the U.S.; many feel the recent opening of Walt Olsney Warld, in the coulted part of Florida, who can be absoned this growth.

venta, in the column pair or remain can only enhance this growth.

You probably have recegnized this development and wondered how you could learn about long-term real estate investing in Florida. Now, like thousands of others, you may find that The Deltona Corpora-tion on a parties have pende. tion can enswer your needs.
The Deltona Corporation has over $300 million dollars in assets and is listed on the New York Stock Exchange. It has created seven total change. R has created seven total communities in Fronta... the first is nearing its tenth birthday and already has more than 9,000 residents. Another is the Florida west coast community—Marce Island—where an $18 million dollar resort hotel was opened this pact fall; where 3,500 residents loday enjoy a resort latend with extensive recreational facilities and where development of homes, endominitums and com-marcial teames common at an unabaled pace.

Ne one gives the investor a wider choice of Florida land than Detona. BRIDGE,

One of the most unusual tricks in the recent World Team Olym-piad in Miami Beach, or indeed in any other tournament. was won by West on the diagramed deal from a match between Switzerland and Peru.

The Peruvian North-South reached a normal contract of three no-trump in a slightly sorprising way: by American standards. North's rebid of two spanes and South's final jump to three no-trump was an overbid, constdering that he had already shown a strong hand by revers-

West made the safe lead of the spade five, and when South won with the ace, he led a low club to dummy's queen. East won with the ace and shifted to hearts. He was allowed to win two heart tricks with the jack and the king, and South won the third heart trick with the ace.

Pass West led the spade five. South had eight tricks at this point, with 10 available if the diamends divided three-two. He could afford to guard against a four-one diamond break, so he planned to duck a diamond into the East hand. He would then be in a position to claim the contract. on the reasonable assumption that West held the heart queen.

West was one of the world's great players, Jean Besse of Switzerland, and his attention lapsed for a moment when South led the diamond deuce. Instead of playing the nine, which would have insured the defeat of the contract, West played the four.

The actual distribution did not occur to South, and he was determined to duck a trick. Happy that West had not played a higher diamood, he confidently called for the three from dummy.

When Besse had recovered from the shock of winning the first round of the suit with the four spot, he cashed the heart queen to defeat the contract. Next time South is in this position, he will probably exert himself to the extent of playing the seven from dummy.

Brazil's Soccer Effort Gives Europe Hope

By Brian Glanville LONDON, July 18 (IHT) .-- Now that the European Nations championship is over, all roads, in football, lead to West Germany automatic passport. and 1974, when the next World Cup finale will be played. Tha qualifying competition is already under way, and next season will gather tremendous impetus. For the European teams, the results of the recently concluded Independence Trophy, in Brazil, have been immensely encourag-

True, Brazil won the final, as everyone expected—for what other purpose, save the promoting of Joso Havelange's candidature to the FIFA presideocy, was it conceived at all? But the manner of its winning was anything hut impressive. Brazil was held to a 0-0 draw hy the mediocre Czechs, squeaked through 1-0 with a late goal against a Scotland team for below full strength. and ultimately squeezed by Portugal 1-0 in the final, with a goal twn minutes from the end. Since the Portuguese were playing far out of their normal season, and had had to play seveo previous matches in the tournament to the Brazilians' three, there was every reason for seeing the result as a moral victory for the Porfinest team for years.

Brazil, playing in front of its crowds, on its own soil, against what was not on the face of it, remotely the cream of Europe-of the four Nations Cup semifinalists, nnly the Soviet Union entered the Independence Trophy, and their team had only one player who completed in Belgium-made awfully heavy weather of its victory. of 1964. Expressing admiration of the Brazilian team, he added that he had the impression that it was not really at ease, that its play was too slow, that it exchanged too many short passes. Artur Jorge, the team's polyglot center-forward, who came on as a substitute in the final, observed that it was easier for an Englishman to play like a Brazilian than a Brazilian to play like an Englishman, with all the extra stamina that this implies.

Merckx Finishes 2d, But Retains Large Margin

AIX-LES-BAINS, France. July 18 (Reuters)—Prenchman Cyrille Guimard scored his fifth stage victory in the Tour de France cycle race today but could make no dent on the overall lead of Beigian Eddy Mercky. For the second successive day, Guimard nipped Merckx in the final sprint, a 28-kilometer climb up Mont Revard near here in today's 15th stage. But though Guimard could take nothing away from Mercka's 6-minute 20-second lead, France's Raymond Poulidor produced another brilliant ride to grab third place overall.

THE PLANT-MAGIC MAN

By Lawrence Durrell ARLES, France (IHI), Despite the handsome new highways which criss-cross Provence today many of the old exasperating bottlenecks still exist, notable among them the entry into Arles where the motorway curves into the entrance of the town, and is thrust into narrowing streets which soon get wedged up by cars. One can stay bogged down here for as much as 20 minutes or longer in full summer. And here the exasperated eye of the traveler will catch sight of a poster placed at the entry of the market by some disgusted Provençal which says in French: Tourist, you are in famous Provence, a country now colonized, polluted and despoiled: its language forgotten, its ancient traditions betrayed, its soul extinguished. I am translating from memory. It makes one want to slink away-but with such a traffic jam one can do no slinking; one is wedg-

izes that all is not lost. What saves Provence is the high good humor of its ancient inhabitants, and the slashing style of its characters-the Midi specializes in characters of a classical roundness. Myself I am always reassured by the Plant Man, Ludo Chardenon, who holds a central stall every Saturday, selling a bewildering variety of kitchen herbs as well as many herbal remedies with much of the panache of a great magician. His broad handsome face is always laughing, and he takes the world (which includes himself) with a pinch of salt, bantering his way through the day, helped hy his pretty silent

Skepticism

I had often seen him, for he works several of the local fairs, and had been intrigued by his wares; indeed I had often bought little sachets of his fresh herbs. But like most people I shared a certain skepticism uf his herbal cures. I was driven to try his famous Number Four by sheer desperation. The top doctors of Geneva, Paris and London had failed to cure a relapsing eczema which had made my life miserable for several years. To my astonishment in less than 10 days one of Chardenon's infusions had done the trick.

I sought him out when I was next in Arles on a Saturday and asked him if he would tell me a little about his life. He was completely himself and quite unfanatical about his medicinal plants. His grandmother had trained him, he said, when he was very small in the difficult art of plant-detection -as tricky an art as mushroomrecognition, for quite a lot of plants are poisonous. He was operating what he called with a grin "Old Grandma's Homecures." He had several herbals she had used to crosscheck end a lot of invaluable notes she had left him. Moreover (this I had not known) all his herbs were hand-picked by himself and hand-packed. There was no corner of Provence that he did not know, and know seasonally, so to speak: "By now the thyme will be best around Sommieres; and the wild bourdane around Les Baux." A great deal of his time is spent planthunting in his old ear. At night he dries, cuts, and mixes up his packets of herbs, both curative and the humbler kitchen

He invited me to spend some time with him in his "factory" as he called it sardonically; I was curious to see how this oneman herbalist worked. Of course the Midi is traditionally interested in herb teas and infusions, and some of the rarer items Mr. Chardenon collects for the chemists of Nimes and Avignon. It is quite an art to know, first how to cut and select, and then to lay by the plants to dry: let alone the business of weighing and dosing his herbal cures-for nothing is done haphazard, special quantities are observed, bunches are weighed. Sometimes there

He lives just outside Arles in pleasant little garden among number of sheds which house his plant stock; in other sheds the cut plants are lying in heaps, set out to dry. Here a perfect order reigns. On a chopping block made for meat lie his shears and knives. He received me in his garden with some of the dignity of a minor prelate. He refers to himself self-deprecatingly as a Cevenol peasant, but he is a man of some culture whose joviality never impairs a certain innate dignity.

The hunch he gave me was marvelous cooked outside in the garden on a fire of vine trimmings. The meat had been dosed with a special marinade of his choicest herbs steeped in unrefined utive oil. This too was a product which he sold and I bought a number of pots. Eight herbs went into this ofly paste, he told me; you plaster the meat with it for an hour or two before grilling. It was pleasant to see that he was himself as much a box viveus as a supant, and kept a fine table, for the most part out of doors under a fig tree. Here we drank a fine red wine which he had "fortified" (he also sells a strong fortifiant pour le vin: watch it.) Here I heard an account of his life in the Cevennes, for his family came from a minute village near Anduze.

'In those places doctors were few and far away and we had to fend for ourselves." Chardenon held up a glass to let the light turn it to a ruby. "I have no means of knowing how old all this knowledge is. My grandmother got it from her grandmother, and so back several centuries at least; but you know, myself I often wonder if a lot of it couldn't go back to Romans and Greeks. Some of the cures mentioned in writers like Athensius, for example—it's that. Our herbals are more detailed now; but we are bored with long cures and I can't achieve anything under three months. There is nothing to be done. And I don't decry modern chemistry. Many of the doctors in Arles are friends, and I have had my things checked over from the chemical point of view. But it's a different sort of medicine. see, from the mechanical point of view, you can take a pill and get an effect say for constipation. But you will have to keep on taking it, whereas with my old decoctions you slowly re-educate the organ which has started to play up and bring it back into phase."

Learning

But apart from all this one can see in the enthusiasm which lights up his face when he speaks of them that the plants are really a passion—they re-unite him to his childhood, to those long walks in the hills and garrigues of Provence with his grandmother, learning to identify the wildflowers and herbs which surrounded the village: learning to pick them. dry them, weigh them. "I learned many curious things from her which stood me in good stead. For example, during the war when we were all but starving and I had children to feed up there in the hills, I made some false sosp with plant which froths, and sold lots of it to the Germans. I exist, on what I know, in about a kilometer of ground, I could keep alive without too much anxiety. I often did so during

And yet I was astonished to learn that he had only been operating as a plant seller for about 10 years. 'I never somehow thought that this gift might make me a living" he says. "Yet I myself always cured the illnesses of myself and my friends with plants. I must be awfully slow. I used to lay up a whole private pharmacy in my loft. Never thought of marketing it. Suddenly when I started up I realized that there would be no competition as nobody knows what I know about plants. Why the devil they don't teach Boy Scouts this sort of thing I don't know. It would fascinate them as it fascinated me when I was small. But it takes time. It's like learning Chinese st first." He adores the open sir, the market-towns on their fair days, the banter and pleasantries of his fellow forming as they set out their stalls in the open, sometimes (25 at the Saintes-Maries) in the sound of the sea And now discriminating clients have emerged to encourage him private patients, so to speak, from Geneva, Brussels and Paris; and of course those who trest their kitchens right buy his herbs.

bustle and clatter of the little

He is now selling his sachets by post to young couples in Paris and London. He does notwant to expand too much to lose the personal touch; for he is proud that his product is all hand-packed and gathered in these fabled hills of Provence. But developing success has driven him to have a prospectus printed which deals with the tisanes, the herbal teas, which are of service in many obstinate illnesses he claims to influence complaints as diverse as diabetes, asthma, eczema and so on. For the eczema preparation I am prepared to youch, and I have seen several other cases where his recipes have cured or at least alleviated tedious complaints. It is not for nothing that right on top of his stall (which is full of bottles and bundles of herbal decoctions) is a portrait of his grandmother which he pats from time to time with respectful affection. It is her wisdom he dispenses and he lets the passing crowd see his gratitude to her memory. "Roll up. Roll up, good citizens," he is apt to cry, "and try one of Grannie's Home Cures. Marvelous stuff. Why waste your money on doctors and chemists when for 3,000 old francs Grannie's mixiares can cure you?" All his cures cost 3,000 old francs, which is about the cost of a single cortisone injection. But they are strangely efficacious. I can vouch for one eczema, one case of asthma and one of renal calculus being influenced by Grannie.

Recently he has started to have quite a postbag; all letters are answered by hand for he has no secretary. Ludo Chardenon, Campagne Jeanne, Grande Route de Tarascon, 13200 Arles, will reach him if you wish him to send you his surprise pack of Eight Provencal Herbs" or a Leaving him that evening I drove back through the town. The bottlenecks had shifted and the roads were clear again. Just by the sign ebout Provence being raped and all that I picked up a university student from America who was bound for Nimes. He was a classics man, was just back from walking all over Greece, and had a volume of the Loch Sophocles the play which has the hymn to Attika. It reminded me perversely of the poster at Arles though it said the exact opposite. "Stranger you have reached a famous land the abode of lovely horses, you have Kolonos here in the green leaves the nightingale sings all day, here is the forest home of laughing Dionysos... Thinking back to Mr. Ludovic Chardenon of Arles as I drove back to my village I wondered if really everything was over for us—everything with color and sap and grace. The poster in Arles and the verses of Sophocles between them spanned centuries. Yet I saw him as belonging to that obstinate tribe of men, the creative yea-saying ones, who are obstinately holding the past in Provence and elsewhere until the rest of us come to our. senses and decide what we want to live for, and with, and how.

After the two honorable gentle-men righted the plane, they tried a landing, coming in over a golf course, shearing off a wing and tearing up the 18th hole. On a second try Gordon landed the plane but bounced it so heavily that it crumpled stambled out of their flight deck, praising the invention of the Canadian-built DC-10 flight simulator but wondering if the television-screen visual attachment was not a little too graphic.
